PUBLISHER'S NOTE

This is a short, sample, edition of Amock, with material taken from early issues. It is intended to give the reader an idea of the kind of thing we do.

The full version of Amock is a 32 page, monthly e-magazine, available in PDF and SWF (page -flipping) formats from the Amock website. It is published and edited by award-winning writer, Gurmeet Mattu, together with some of the UK's finest, young, comedy writers. It contains spoof news and articles, cartoons, photographs, horoscopes and advice columns. Everything you'd expect in a general-interest magazine, but with a comedy twist. Our aim is to Mock every facet of human life, hence our title. It should appeal to those who are young at heart and have a healthy disregard for the serious. People who enjoy the comedy of such as Monty Python, the Goons, Viz and the Marx Bros.

ROCK GOD TO STAND FOR PRESIDENT

Rock God, Phil Eardrum, lead guitarist with The Nostrils, and a man who has been declared clinically dead twice, is to stand for President at the next elections on a fascist platform.

"I got the idea from a book about camping, man," he said in his penthouse flat in LA last night. "The fascist thing is all about picking on a minority and blaming them for all of society's problems. So, I've decided that it's bloody pygmy Eskimos that are responsible for all our ills and should be persecuted."

He was ready for the argument that pygmy Eskimos were remarkable for being relatively unknown, far less as the engines of our destruction.

"They're masters of disguise, see. They learn it at their mother's knee and it's ingrained in them. They're everywhere and we don't know about about it. That chair there, that could be a pygmy Eskimo, or that tray of vol au vents, or that car out on the street, the blue Audi, not the Honda. They take our jobs and our women and eat blubber. Lots of blubber. When did you last see any blubber? See, the bloody pygmy Eskimos have got it all, so we don't get none. They plan to bring the world to its knees by cornering the world's supply of blubber and it's down to us to stop them. If you think you spot a pygmy Eskimo, even if he's disguised as a small boulder, you go and give him a good kicking. We need to reclaim our country and our heritage. And our blubber."

Eardrum also claimed that his last stay at a rehab clinic (his nineteenth) had finally cured him of his addiction to psychedelic drugs. "It's nothing but blubber for me from now on, man," he said before sweeping off to his next gig with his entourage of blonde dentists. "They can't disguise themselves as blonde dentists, everybody knows that."

SEX-CHANGE WEEKENDS ARE HERE

Getting in touch with your feminine side could be a weekend thing with news that scientists at the San Francisco Institute for the Sexually Confused have created a drug which allows temporary sex-changes. The drug works by suppressing the body's natural hormones, allowing those of the opposite sex, which are always present, to emerge. The effect lasts for forty eight hours.

One enthusiastic user is Bob Nasty of London, who has been using the drug, called Mixiton, for several months.

"It's a stress-relief thing for me," he told this reporter. "I pop the tab on a Friday evening and become Jill for the weekend. This allows me to wear bras and have men kiss me, which is something I miss since giving up rugby playing due to a groin injury. It's opened up a whole new area for me."

Bob/Jill (pictured) went on to say, "I have a girlfriend, Alice, during the week and she becomes Alex at the weekend, but I don't see much of him as he tends to go out with his mates to watch a football match and get drunk. I'm really looking forward to a weekend when she doesn't take Mixiton and we can have a girly weekend together."

Alice said, "Bob used to love getting into my pants, and now he really does. He's always borrowing my stuff."

PARROT TO SUE MONTY PYTHON

A parrot is to sue the legendary Monty Python comedy team, claiming that his grandfather, who appeared in the famous 'Dead Parrot' sketch, was not compensated adequately for his performance in the TV show.

George Parrot said, "It's all right for Cleese and Palin to swan about with their fame and fortune but what about my poor old gramps, Ernie? It was his performance as a deceased parrot, what had shuffled off this mortal coil, which bought them their accolades. And what did he get for it, a handful of birdseed. He was such a good actor that viewers assumed that it was an actual dead parrot that was used. But it was Ernie, acting his socks off. Admittedly he had a very bad agent but the Pythons should cough up."

TAJ MAHAL TO BECOME CALL CENTRE

The Taj Mahal in Agra, India, noted as one of the most beautiful buildings in the world, is to become an IT support call centre it was announced yesterday.

"We are suffering from a great backlash from western consumers," explained Bandu Lal, President of the Indiatalks Corporation, which will be staffing the centre. "They do not like their western companies outsourcing to India and thus reducing the number of jobs available to them. Also they are aggrieved that our call centre operatives do not appreciate all the nuances of the way the English is spoken in their native countries. For instance, what does the 'up yours' and 'sit on it' mean? It is most confusing as these are not phrases we use here. If it is intended as the insult it is not very effective. We much prefer to be creative and use terms like, 'Your face resembles the hinder parts of a baboon'. Now, when we relocate to the Taj we hope that callers will realise that they are talking to someone who is sitting in a most beautiful place and should be respected and not abused."

The Taj Mahal was built in the 17th century by the Mughal emperor, Shah Jahan, for his wife, Mumtaz Mahal, and some have said that to use it as a call centre is a desecration of an artistic masterpiece. Bandu Lal, however, was not fazed. "If India wants to progress we cannot hold onto the past. We need jobs and we have educated and well-trained people to do those jobs. To the critics I say, 'Blow me!'"

JULIE: Hey you, careful you don't get the sack, you've only just started that job.

SHARON: But this isn't private business, it's pleasure.

JULIE: You mean it's a pleasure to talk to me, that's real sweet.

SHARON: You're my best pal, Jules, of course it's a pleasure.

JULIE: So, who is it you're working for?

SHARON: Frobisher & Crutch, they make ball bearings. But Mr Crutch died when he fell into a finishing machine. Certainly did it's job, finished him off. There's a plaque in his memory in the foyer.

JULIE: Plaque? Yuch, that's the stuff on your teeth, right?

SHARON: No, this is a different one. It says, 'In memory of Reginald Crutch, who gave his life for ball bearings'.

JULIE: So, how's the job anyway?

SHARON: It's alright. My boss is like that teacher we used to have, always adjusting his pants. His name's Mr Scrutton and you can imagine what I call him.

JULIE: No.

SHARON: Julie! Anyway, he's got a 36" inside leg.

JULIE: How do you know that?

SHARON: He told me. He's real proud of it. It's his major claim to fame, the big skinny ratbag, fiddling with his pants.

JULIE: Sounds like a pervo.

SHARON: No, he's too old for that, he must be over 40. Mind you, his screensaver's a supermodel in a bikini.

JULIE: My mom says they never get too old, it's in their genes.

SHARON: He doesn't wear jeans, least not to work, just an old suit that's seen better days. You'd think his wife would at least get it dry-cleaned now and again.

JULIE: Oh, he's got a wife? They're the worst sort.

SHARON: She came round to the office last week, tiny slip of a woman. He was all over her like a rash, calling her 'my darling' and kissing her hand.

JULIE: I can't stand men like that, creeps.

SHARON: He reckons it's romantic. Said, 'You'll note, Miss Murphy, that the spirit of romance still exists between my wife and I, even though we've been married for over 15 years.' Then he adjusted his pants again.

JULIE: Any good looking guys?

SHARON: Haven't met anybody super-smashing yet, but there's a few I wouldn't mind getting into the stationery cupboard.

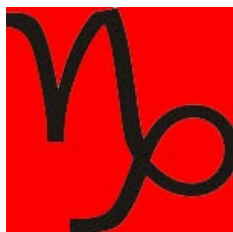

JULIE: That's my Sharon! The men of the world have no chance when Julie and Sharon are on the rampage.

SHARON: Help, here comes Scrotum, I'll need to go. See you later, pal.

JULIE: I'll text you when I get home, just to catch up.

YOUR STARS WITH MYSTIC MABEL

Capricorn - December 22- January 20

You will meet a tall man. Do not trust him as he is lying to you about his height. Wear blue at all times unless you have had cereal for breakfast. Do not whistle in the afternoon.

Aquarius - January 21 – February 19

Nothing will happen for you this month.

Pisces - February 20 – March 20

Don't be afraid of chickens, even if they feature large in your dreams. Wear two sweaters on Wednesdays if your name is George. Tell lies to people called Colin.

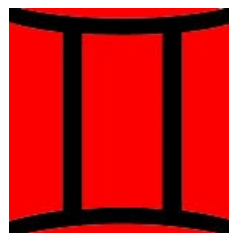

Aries - March 21- April 20

Beware of women with buck teeth. Your future looks good if you gamble all your money on a horse called Nostradamus's Hat. Avoid trains.

Taurus - April 21- May 21

Your addiction to television is causing you health problems. Have someone else deliver them. Your niece hates you and you should buy stocks in the Canberra Hot Air Balloon Co.

Gemini - May 21- June 21

Your dreams, filthy though they are, are about to come true. Her name is Evadne and you will meet her in a dockside bar where she will be surrounded by sailors. Do not marry her.

Cancer - June 22 – July 23

Have you been drinking excessively? If not, why not? I get pissed every Wednesday and twice at the weekend. It's Bacardi, since you ask and, yes, I will have a large one.

Leo - July 24 – August 23

Those aches and pains are really taking their toll on you, aren't they, Leo? This is the result of you avoiding people called Ralph. Not all Ralphs are after your money. Not even your brother in law.

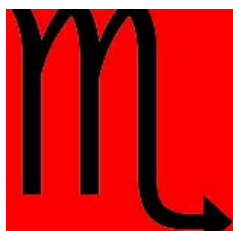

Virgo - August 24 – September 23

The predictions I made for you last month were incorrect due to flaws in my starcharts. The Lottery win is due this month, along with the satin sheath dress and the invitation to drinks with Bob.

Libra - September 24- October 23

Oh, Libra, you are in a jam. The stars don't really hold much promise for you this month. Why not have a nice, long, sleep and just let it slip by?

Scorpio - October 24 – November 22

You will meet a beautiful woman who you will be besotted with, but who will reject you. Get your revenge in first and tell her to beat it. Her name is Helen.

Sagittarius - November 23 – December 21

The time has come for you to shape up and face the future. Then again, if you don't feel like it, that's okay.

MOVIES & PIZZA

Dear Pete,
How can I get Simone Perry to show me her boobies?
I took her to the movies and even bought her a pizza but she still wouldn't show me them. My buddy Mike said all girls would show you their boobies if you took them to the movies and bought them pizza. Do you think I should have got more topping?
Cal, Phoenix

Dear Cal,
Young men wishing to gaze upon the busties of young ladies must learn patience. Several more applications of movie and pizza may be required before a viewing is permitted and even then it may be from a distance and require a telescope, as young ladies are well aware that young men are rarely satisfied with visual gratification alone and may well attempt manual stimulus.
Pete

HAIR

Dear Professor Pete,
My girlfriend has beautiful, long, blonde hair but finds taking care of it very wearisome. She keeps threatening that one day she will have it all cut off and I worry that she won't be as attractive with short hair.
What can I do to stop her from cutting her hair?
Marty, Prague

Dear Marty,
Man, that's an easy one. Just encase her entire head in concrete so that scissors cannot reach her tresses.
Pile her hair up on top of her head first and then mould round in the shape of a helmet. When she is sleeping would be a good time.
Pete

YOUTH

Dear Prof,
I am having an affair with an older married woman, which is a new venture for me. However she complains that I am not as well built as her husband, nor as accomplished a lover, which makes me wonder as to why she is cavorting with me. I've tried to think of an ulterior motive but can't think of any. Can you suggest anything?
Ross, Chicago

Dear Ross,
It is your youth she is after; the ability to flaunt her young lover in front of her friends. Cavorting with her for a lengthy period will leave you as old and bedraggled as her husband, when she will cast you aside for a younger model.
Pete

NOTCH

Dear Pete,
I would like to give myself to Bert Milverton, but not if I'm only going to be another notch on his bedpost. Is there any way to ensure this before I concede to his demands?
Cathy, Malaga

Dear Cathy,
No absolute guarantees can be given regarding a man's intentions, save that he will divest you of your garments given the smallest opportunity. I would therefore recommend that you take out an insurance policy to ensure that you are not merely being used by Mr Milverton. I suggest you find a company which specialises in covering naughty pastimes or, depending on the circumstances of your encounter,
dangerous sports.
Pete

FISH

Dear Professor,
I find myself incredibly attracted to our local librarian, Lillian Cody, but every time I ask her out she merely snorts and charges me late return fees. I should ignore her and move on, on the principle that there are many more fish in the seas but the fact is that the seas in our area have been rather over-fished and the stock is depleted. How can I get her to take me seriously?
George, Luton

Dear George,
Tell her that the area is about to be re-stocked from a fish farm and her chances of being caught in anybody's net are diminishing rapidly. If she gets your drift she is likely to be on you like a great white shark, so be prepared for bites. Alternatively, you could always take up fishing.
Pete

he'll solve them for you.

AM-DRAM GROUP ARE MAGNIFICENT

The Upper Wobbly Amateur Drama Society of Leicestershire in England are planning a stage version of movie The Magnificent Seven for their debut production this autumn.

"It will be based on the Sturges movie and not the Kurosawa version," said director, Nobby Carter, who will also play Vin, the part played by Steve McQueen in the epic western.

"I will be Chris, the Yul Brynner part," added Sally, Nobby's wife, "and I will be shaving my head to get into character. Vicky will be Britt, as she's so good with kitchen knives and Joe will take the Robert Vaughn part as he's such a depressing shit."

"We're all western fans," continued Nobby, "and were fairly determined to bring a classic western to the stage for the Upper Wobbly audience. We considered The Alamo and Gunfight at the OK Corral, and Lou even suggested Blazing Saddles, but Betty refused to do the flatulence scene which I, as the director, thought was essential to the basic character development within the plot arc. The only change we have made is that, instead of helping out poor Mexican villagers, our Magnificent Seven will be helping out a group of Leicester chiropodists who are being threatened by a gang of accountants. However, neither the chiropodists or accountants actually appear in the piece." "

"In the end run it came down to the fact that Melvin had the soundtrack album," Sally contributed.

"That and the fact we have seven actors," concluded director Nobby.

Sally Carter displays incredible acting skills.

CODES IN TARTAN

Pic by tienvijftien

Researchers at Strathclyde University in Glasgow, Scotland, claim to have discovered the secret behind tartan or plaid, as it is known in the U.S.

"Tartan contains a hidden code," explained Dr Noddy Chancer, "It literally speaks to us. Early tartans, identified with the regions of Scotland where they were manufactured, rather than individual clans, but they all told of the origins of the celtic peoples in the middle of the Euro-Asian landmass and their migration to the western fringes of Europe. All tartans are actually a history book in cloth. This was the reason why the wearing of tartan was banned by the English in 1746, they were trying to extinguish our history."

The research team at the University have not yet decoded all of the 7,000 currently recognised tartans but are making good progress.

"The thing is," added Chancer, "that newer tartans have been designed without any knowledge of the code they represent and they therefore read as utter gibberish or as something very rude. The official tartan of Microapple Computers, designed last year, for instance reads 'I would rather dance with a clergyman than go trout fishing.' I can't believe that the designer actually meant to say that, though graphic designers are often very sad and lonely people."

WIFE TO SUE JUSTICE DEPT. FOR TURNING HUBBY GAY

The wife of convicted drug-dealer Joe 'Lefty' Henderson is to sue the Federal Government, claiming that the five years he spent in jail have turned him into a homosexual.

"He was a happily married man before he went in," she complained, "but the hoosegow introduced him to man-love and now he's addicted."

Brenda, Lefty's wife and mother of their four children now plans to take the Feds to court and is claiming damages for loss of affection and contributing to the destruction of their marriage.

"He was a normal guy," she continued, "He drank beer and watched football till those queers got a hold of him. "I'm sorry for Brenda, but I can't help it," Lefty said.

Now all he wants to do is go clothes shopping with me. He is a small man and had to take the passive role in gaol, but it turned out he liked it and now he doesn't even look at me in that way. He hasn't touched me since he got out. His idea of a good night out nowadays is a gay bar or a Barbra Streisand movie. I am a normal woman and have the normal needs of a woman which are going unfulfilled due to my Lefty turning into a fag. Sure he deserved to get punished for the dope dealing, that was stupid, but the government doesn't have the right to turn a straight guy into a goddam homosexual."

OBAMA SUGGESTS RETURN TO SLAVERY

US President Barack Obama is suggesting a return to slavery as a way out of the current economic downturn with millions threatened with unemployment.

"History only gives us a negative impression of the institution of slavery," he said at a recent press conference. "Modern day slavery would have no racist connotations and would be strictly controlled."

He went on to detail the steps he thought necessary to revive the practice which has been outlawed in the civilised world for over a hundred years.

"Being a slave would be open to all, regardless of race, colour or creed and similarly, being a slave owner would be equal opportunity. The slave owner would not be permitted to punish his slave in any physical fashion, apart from mild spanking, and any disputes would be resolved by an independent arbitrator. The slave owner would contract to provide his slave with housing, food and a decent standard of living including health-care, while the slave would offer his labour on an unwaged basis."

"The truth is that we have got things wrong," Obama explained, "People today aren't looking for jobs, they're looking for wages, which is quite a different thing. But if you take wages out of the equation and supply the necessities of life which those wages would have bought, you have a whole new ball game. Communism has collapsed, capitalism has collapsed, slavery's time has come."

"He's nuts," commented a Republican spokesman. "What he's suggesting is indentured labour, a return to serfdom."

"Serf!" was the President's response, "That's the word I was looking for."

LESBIANS ATTACK

Queen Eleanor of Lesbia has announced that she will send troops from the Lesbian Army to support democracy's fight against terrorism in Afghanistan. This will be the first time that Lesbian troops have seen action since the formation of the Lesbian nation, and comes at the request of U.S. President, Barack Obama.

In her statement the Queen said, "We will be sending a special division of Attack Lesbians but not the legendary Lipstick Legion. The Lipsticks fight wearing stiletto heels and these are not suitable for the Afghan terrain."

The Lesbian Army, though small in number, is extremely well-equipped and superbly trained. Her Majesty's statement continued, "We cannot stand apart from the rest of the world. Many Lesbians have been the victims of terrorism and this cannot be tolerated. I warn the terrorists now, cease your evil ways or face the wrath of enraged Lesbians. I have ordered my girls to don their battle panties and shoulder their death-dealing sex toys."

The Lesbian Army will be supported by members of the Lesbian Special Forces who are specialists in night fighting and killing the enemy using only advanced frottage techniques.

The Queen's statement concluded with these stirring words, "The terrorists may think they have the upper hand and can give us the finger, but we can lick them."
